

Preventing Stillbirth in South Dakota

South Dakota has the 17th highest stillbirth rate in the country, losing 78 babies a year to stillbirth¹.

Within those distressing statistics, racial disparities paint a more startling picture. African American women experience stillbirth at twice the rate of the general pregnant population. Native American and Asian women, and mothers of Hispanic ethnicity, all have elevated rates of stillbirth as well. Parents of all races are ten times more likely to lose their baby to stillbirth than they are to SIDS, yet little prenatal education is dedicated to what can be done to prevent stillbirth.

Count the Kicks is on a mission to change that!

Count the Kicks² is a stillbirth prevention public health campaign that teaches pregnant moms to literally count their babies' movements daily in their third trimester. Our free mobile app makes it easier than ever to count kicks and even records a 21-day history, so a mom can see her baby's own kick patterns. Evidence shows that when moms know what is normal for their baby, they also are more aware of possible signs of distress and are empowered to speak to their medical provider. Count the Kicks has yielded tremendous success in Iowa, where the campaign got its start. In the first five years, Iowa's stillbirth rate decreased 26% and went from the 33rd worst to the 3rd best stillbirth rate in the country.

South Dakota is fortunate to be the home of one of our volunteer Count the Kicks Ambassadors. Jennifer McCune, of Sioux City, thankfully saved her son Danny in 2007. "I am thrilled to be able to give back to an organization that has given me so much."

We are on a mission to reduce stillbirth by 26% in every state, just as we did in Iowa. For South Dakota, that means saving the lives of 20 babies every year. We achieved this in Iowa not only with mom-to-mom sharing, but through a strategic public health awareness campaign aimed at maternity care providers – OB/GYN clinics, birthing hospitals, childbirth education classes, visiting nurses and social service providers. Four states – Iowa, Illinois, Missouri, and Nebraska – have local funding agreements through health departments, foundation grants and/or private donations to ensure all our printed materials are free of charge across their states. Although our educational materials are available for purchase, we would like to see them available free of charge to South Dakota providers as well. We currently have no funding for dedicated outreach in South Dakota, but we are actively seeking partners.

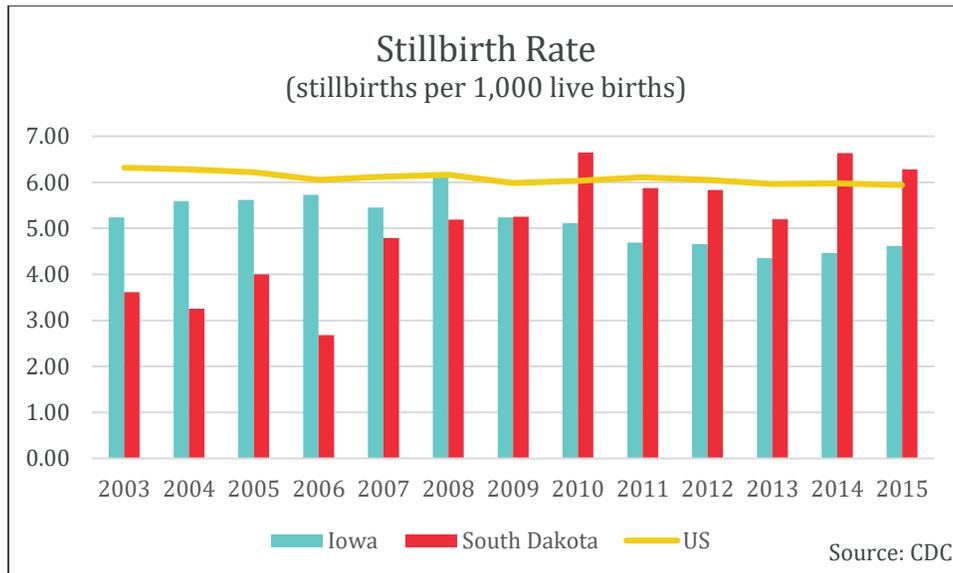

We invite you to save babies with us!

South Dakota specific data

To fully launch Count the Kicks in South Dakota, we would:

- Conduct a call and mail campaign with all known maternal health providers and offer our printed educational materials be sent to them for free
- Inform all maternal health providers of our free digital tools they can use to implement Count the Kicks into their practice, such as how-to videos and lesson plans for incorporating kick counting into your prenatal classes
- Strategically place social media ads to expecting South Dakota moms, encouraging them to download the free Count the Kicks app
- Have a presence at a well-attended baby show for direct mom-to-mom outreach
- Continue to tell Jennifer's story in the media – and the story of the babies we save! – to raise awareness and influence more women to download the free Count the Kicks app

To measure program implementation, we will track:

- South Dakota provider material orders, broken down by zip code
- South Dakota Count the Kicks app downloads and use numbers, broken down by zip code
- Social media interaction with South Dakota moms
- Media attention garnered in South Dakota, and more

Program success will be measured by actual stillbirth numbers, as tracked by the South Dakota Department of Health and/or the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.
